OBJECTIVE

Most of the power system analysis problems are complex due to the non-linear nature of the system and also due to the time frame within which the solutions are required. System demand is increasing at an alarming rate, but the quantity of conventional resources are getting reduced. Hence more distributed renewable energy sources are being penetrated into the system. This is making the power system more complex than ever before thus elevating the chances of usage of more and more power system analysis softwares. As such 37 commercial and 28 non-commercial are available softwares world-wide according to Wikipedia as on 04/10/2017.
